

The Los Angeles County Commission on HIV and the UCLA Center for HIV Identification, Prevention, and Treatment Services invite you to attend

HIV Prevalence Rates, Risk Factors and Health Disparities Among Transgender Persons

Thursday, July 9, 2015

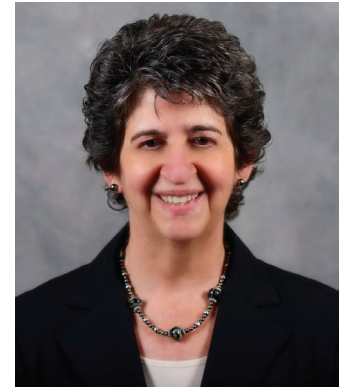

9:30am to 10:30am*

St. Anne's Maternity Home

Foundation Conference Room

155 N. Occidental Boulevard

Los Angeles, CA 90026

The presentation will provide an overview of the HIV prevalence rates among trans male and female individuals in Los Angeles County, and will discuss the syndemic co-factors that impact HIV acquisition and transmission among these populations. The presentation will also address health disparities that have served to limit health care utilization specifically among high-risk trans women. Next step recommendations will be presented.

Cathy J. Reback, PhD, is a Senior Research Scientist with Friends Research Institute, a Research Sociologist with UCLA Integrated Substance Abuse Programs, a Core Scientist with UCLA CHIPTS, and the Executive Director of Friends Community Center in Hollywood. Dr. Reback has been conducting intervention, ethnographic, and epidemiological research with trans women, and has been providing services for trans women for over 20 years. She is a member of the World Professional Association for Transgender Health and is an internationally known researcher in the field of high-risk trans women.
